Dear Dana,

I'm going to make this easy for you.

Yes, today I both visibly watched your video and came into its chat because I wanted to present myself for whatever you or your chat identities chose to do with LIVE interaction and presence.

I also was interested in seeing your presentation because of how you billed it, that James Franco LEFT OUT any occult references. That struck me as odd so I wanted to see what that was all about. I was disappointed that wasn't even discussed.

While I was there, I did not antagonize anyone about anything. I saw you were discombobulated, I also saw you did not hate that I was there, nor does your two hour later "vertical" stream talking crap about why I was there change that view. (presumably after your 'friends' worked you over about it is why you did the second stream)

I am also less than impressed with the veiled and unsaid but visible demands for 1. an apology from me to "make things cool" about my strongly disagreeing with where you went on your research re 'occult' etc. etc. 2. an apology from me to "make things cool" to your 'friends' for shitty treatment (your words).

I'm not welcome in a 'free and open' chat (where I did nothing wrong) UNLESS I do these things?

Yea. Not gonna happen.That whole gambit doesn't appear as anything other than what some might call extortion or emotional blackmail.

What I will do is this.

I challenge you to a live debate, just you and I.

A debate over what are some serious problems with some of your research, some of your friends research, as well as other topics. NO CHAT.

You, of course, will have to call me and work out how we are going to do this, and since I'm such an old woman now (heh) we may have to do it in segments.

I think I'm supposed to say something cheeky like: I will wipe the floor with you. You know it. I know it. But…

Let's just see if you can convince me and the world how right you are, or not.

What say you?
